

Not your average sports talk. We don't focus on wins or losses — we share empowering stories of elite athletes who overcame challenges to become their best versions, and we lift up the women's teams and pioneers who paved the way for equal pay, equal rights, and the chance to play.

Krystalore Crews is the living proof that your best version is still ahead. She went from NFL cheerleader to wheelchair-bound — told she might not walk again — to a 28-time marathon finisher and 50-mile ultramarathoner. A 22-year Air Force Senior Master Sergeant and coach of the Air National Guard marathon team, she now teaches the athletic mindset that turns setbacks into start lines through high-performance and fitness coaching, private coaching, and her Beyond Limits Bootcamp. A dynamic keynote speaker, emcee, and marathon finish-line announcer, she brings one message to every stage — discipline, resilience, and the unshakable belief that the body and mind can be rebuilt, one mile at a time.

PROVOCATIVE TALKING POINTS FOR THE HOST

1. From an NFL sideline to a wheelchair to a 50-mile ultra — what did being told you might not walk again teach you about the athletic mind that no win or loss ever could?
2. You coach the Air National Guard marathon team and elite performers. What separates the athletes who come back from injury from the ones who quit?
3. For the everyday woman who thinks her athletic days are behind her — what does Beyond Limits Bootcamp or your high-performance coaching unlock that she can't do alone?
